FOR OLD PEOPLE!

In old people the nervous system is weakened, and this must be strengthened. One of the most prominent medical writers of the day, in speaking of the prevalence of [illegible] says "The [illegible] which old people often complain of, and which materially disturb their comfort, result from disordered nerves." There is now a nut shell—the medicine for old people [illegible]. Old people are beset with [illegible], [illegible], drowsiness, [illegible], rheumatism, neuralgia. These diseases are of nervous origin. Paine's Celery Compound, that great nerve tonic, is almost a specific in these disorders, and by its regulating influence on the liver, bowels, and kidneys, removes the disorders peculiar to old age. Old people find it stimulating to the vital powers, productive of appetite, and a promoter of digestion.

Sold by druggists. $1. Six for $5.00. Send for eight page paper, with many testimonials from nervous, debilitated and aged people who bless Paine's Celery Compound.

Daniel F. Thompson, of North Yarmouth, aged eighty-three years, who was assaulted by [illegible] some days ago, died of his injuries Thursday morning. [illegible] has been committed to the insane asylum. The funeral of the deceased was held Saturday afternoon.

Mr J. L. Dyer, clerk in the city treasurer's office, Portland, while cutting papers Wednesday, the knife slipped, striking his thumb and severing a small artery. He went at once to a physician who worked on the hand over an hour before he could stop the flow of blood. The gash in Mr Dyer's thumb is a long and deep one.

Sergeant [illegible], of the signal service, who for some time past has been stationed in Washington, at the office of the chief signal officer, has been ordered to the Portland station and assumed charge Friday. Mr H. H. [illegible] who has been temporarily stationed here pending the arrival of Sergeant [illegible] has returned to Eastport.

The express train for Worcester over the Portland & [illegible] railroad, Thursday afternoon, struck and killed Mr Albert Cupps, of West [illegible] station. Mr Cupps was very hard of hearing and thus failed, it is supposed, to hear the approach of the train. He was unmarried.

The initial trip on the Portland & Ogdensburg road under the new management will be a pilgrimage to Quebec and St Anne de Beaupre on September 4th, participated in by many from the line of the Boston and Maine, Maine Central and Rochester roads. Prominent Maine Central men seem confident that the newly acquired line will fulfil all hopes and become a valuable property.

Hancock

Mr Moses Hayes, of Ellsworth, while at work on a new house on Friday last, hung up his coat with $100 in the pocket. Later when he put on his coat again the money was gone. At first two boys were arrested on suspicion, they having been seen about the premises during the day, but they were evidently the wrong parties. Sunday afternoon another boy who had been spending money freely, was arrested. He afterwards confessed to being guilty.

Kennebec

Mr John D. Chase of the Fifth Maine Battery will present to the Battery Association at their reunion at Oakland, next Thursday, a gavel about which many historic associations cling. The head is made from an old rebel cannon wheel, found by Mr Chase on the battlefield at Gettysburg. The handle is of a young peach growing on the same field. At the coming reunion of the association a basket of Gettysburg peaches will form a part of the banquet.

Mr E. Dough[illegible], who has been employed on Mrs J. M. [illegible] grounds on Western Avenue, Augusta, met with a serious accident Wednesday afternoon. While [illegible] a stone past a tree on the place, his leg was caught between the stone and tree. Had the bark of the tree not yielded his leg would probably have been torn from his body. As it was, the limb was crushed so badly that it is feared he will be obliged to have it amputated.

About sixty workmen of the Maine Central railroad shops, at Waterville, have been thrown out of employment. Some twelve of these are first-class men in the machine shop. The reason of this discharge is somewhat shrouded in mystery. The work has been accumulating faster than it could be disposed of, and there is plenty of work on hand at the present time. The workmen feel dissatisfied, as many of the discharged have been in the employ of the road for years, says the Sentinel.

While Mr Fred Brown, of Augusta, was driving his cow to pasture a little beyond the State House recently, he saw by the roadside a small heap of what looked like leather scraps. On examination he found the remains of several pocket-books, from which all valuables had been removed. Among the papers remaining were two checks belonging to [illegible] Potter, which were returned to the owner. Mr Brown also found a leather pocket-book containing some militia blanks on his premises near the top of Winthrop Hill.

In digging the sewer trench in front of [illegible]'s drug store, Augusta, a number of pine logs were unearthed which have never been seen by any person now alive. One of them is three feet five inches in diameter. All are as sound as the day when they were laid there. Mr [illegible] remembers that the late Lot [illegible], of Augusta, once told him that when a boy he had crossed a brook which ran by the side of [illegible] on a log bridge located at this spot, which had been built long before his time. If these logs are the remains of that bridge, they must have been laid over a century ago.

Lincoln

The Boston and Boothbay Land Company have built a new hotel at Spruce Point, Boothbay, which is now open to the public, also a [illegible] landing. This company owns a large tract of land, laid out in cottage lots, and have already a graded avenue leading from Boothbay village.

located from ground to attic in the cottages, and the busy groups of young folks interspersed with occasionally some older and prominent heads, upon the verandas and grounds facing the bay, make a lively picture. Among this gathering are the familiar faces of a large representation from the Queen City. For amusement there are hops, musicales, card parties and sociables, boating and driving, all of which are much enjoyed.

There has been a larger number of yachts in our harbor this season than formerly. For the week past, there has been the [illegible], Lucy, Agnes, Pilgrim, steam yachts [illegible], Juno, and Pilgrim, all of which had parties on board that were well pleased with our quiet town and its surroundings.

The schooner Fannie Hall, Capt. Woodward, with brick from Orland for Boston, put back from [illegible] Harbor, Tuesday morning, to Castine, leaking badly. She was taken onto the dock, but the leak was not found and the deck load was discharged, and she was taken to Belfast, Friday, to be taken out on the railway. The leak is supposed to be a strain caused by grounding while loading.

The arrangements for the reception of the First Maine Heavy Artillery, which will occur here Tuesday next, have been perfected, and a grand occasion is anticipated.

The Unitarian Sewing Circle held their annual fair at Town Hall last Thursday evening, with grand financial results.

The Methodist Society held a supper and sale in the Town Hall Friday, which was well attended.

The steamer Electa is without doubt, the most popular steamer in Maine, and is well deserving of the great amount of patronage which it has received this season. She carried over three hundred passengers in two days, last week, and has a large freight, besides.

The schooner D. I. Patchin, Ordway, sailed Tuesday for Boston with brick from Penobscot.

Schooner Baltic, Wescott, was in the harbor with freight from Boston for Bangor, Monday.

Hon G. M. Warren was nominated by the Republicans for Representative to the Legislature, at a caucus held last Monday night. The caucus closed with three rousing cheers for Harrison and Morton, F. C. Burleigh and James G. Blaine.

SPORTS FOR YOUNG AND OLD—QUAINT AND [illegible] COSTUMES—SWELL [illegible] ETC

[Regular Correspondence Whig & Courier.]

August 17.

Another [illegible] day with heavy showers, light sprinkles, and lots of sunshine. The lawn tennis tournament was postponed until 3 P. M., and it is doubtful if it can then be played, as the ground will be in bad condition. The scores stood yesterday: Paton vs. Henry 6-0, 6-1. A C Coleman vs Small, 6-3, 6-2. Paton vs W Coleman, 6-0, 6-4. Beaumont vs A Coleman, 6-4, 6-4. Beaumont will play Paton, the winner to play Beekman for the cup. Beaumont is a Baltimore man who played for the championship of the Southern Lawn Tennis Association and was beaten by Post. Odds of five to one are offered on Beaumont.

Sullivan covered himself with glory and the fresh earth of her numerous newly made roads, yesterday. People went from hotels, cottages, tent and row boats, yachts, and by steamer. The place was strung with bunting and the wharves were made sylvan by rows of firs along them. Everything on the programme was given except canoeing the falls. The tennis tournament was very fine, the playing of the Thompson brothers exciting round after round of applause. They were the victors. The 100-mile dash was very good and was won by Frank Howard, time, 11 seconds. Mr Thomas Whitteridge, who came in second, is a member of the Baltimore Athletic Club, a fine sprinter, was in bad condition to run. He has covered same distance in seven seconds and a fraction. He has now more medals than he can wear. The high jump was won by him. The yacht race was closely contested and was won by the Agnes, but Mr Hunt withdrew from the contest and the Hornet was finally declared winner. The Shetland pony race was very attractive to little folk. On first heat one pony bolted the course and the rest followed. The race was won by "Arabia," ridden by an almost fully grown lad. The tub race was won by a small boy. Mr Rust won the steeple chase which was a fine one. He rode his new hunter for the first time. The prizes were all of silver, in many instances being quite handsome and costly. The fireworks put off at night were a surprise to all. The scene was fairylike in its beauty. All prominent society people were present. Bar Harbor is now looked to to finish the season in her usual good style. Gen Lawrence, of Medford, took over quite a party on his large steam yacht, the Ida. Among them were Mrs. and Miss [illegible] Frost, Col Clarence Frost, Mrs. [illegible], Mr and Mrs. James A Trowbridge, Mr and Mrs. Edward Trowbridge, Mr [illegible], of Charleston, Mrs. Gage and daughters, of Boston, Mr and Mrs Holbrook, and many others. Gen. Lawrence is a most gracious and hospitable host and is always planning some pleasure for others.

Some of the costumes worn here this year outdo anything ever before attempted in the way of the picturesque. The young men particularly strive to outdo each other. One or two affect green and yellow to a manner that belongs [illegible] in the [illegible]. A pair of pink and white striped pants, loose and baggy, with the stripes running up and down, promenaded up and down the English piazza to-day. A Mr. [illegible], of Washington, affects a Scotch cap with long ribbon streamers from the back, and a Scotch tweed suit. While the independence in dress is pleasant in many instances, it is sometimes carried to an extent bordering on the ridiculous.

The hop at the Rockaway Hotel was well attended last night.

By the way, one of the devotees of Terpsichore, whose social place is the atmosphere of Music Hall, has lately grown more ambitious and so has patronized the hops at one of the swell hotels.

Several quiet dinners were given yesterday [illegible]

New York. The Colonel was probably the youngest man ever so honored.

Mr Robert Handy, who is a guest at the West End, is the leading real estate man of St Paul, is president of the St Paul street [illegible] Company, and connected with nearly all of that wonderful city's more [illegible] enterprises. Mr Handy is but little past twenty-seven, is an ardent and [illegible] [illegible] a paid writer on the [illegible] Press. His [illegible] his personal attention, and his reputation as a keen business man is second to none in the great Northwest. By the way, he has lately sold the St Paul Globe for $300,000 for [illegible] papers should [illegible].

Mrs [illegible] gave the swell reception of the season at her cottage [illegible] to-day, in honor of Miss [illegible], a celebrated southern beauty, who is her guest. The Bar Harbor band furnished music for dancing. The tea house, which is a long structure extending out [illegible], [illegible], and tropical plants. A number of [illegible] and [illegible] ferns, boxes of the [illegible] flowers were scattered about the room. All the most fashionable people here will attend. Plainly Mrs. Mc[illegible] gave a first reception. She has given a number of teas and luncheons.

Col Thomas E. Barker of Malden who has large interests in [illegible] [illegible], joined by Mrs. Barker and the Misses Barker are in town to-day. Colonel and Mrs. Barker are widely known in social circles of Boston and adjoining cities.

Col Moses P. Handy, one of the best known journalists of the country, is a guest at the West End. Col Handy has enjoyed the distinction of succeeding himself as president of the Clover Club, the swell journalistic club of the country, ever since its organization and in that capacity has entertained the most prominent men of this and foreign nations.

Miss Maloney who is chaperoned by Mrs. Thomas J. Stewart, is voted a beauty. She is a tall, willowy blonde and dresses in exquisite taste.

Mr Theodore Polhemus Capper, of New York is eagerly sought after as an escort by young ladies and one of the [illegible] of his sex.

The "[illegible]," the handsome steamer belonging to Mr [illegible] of Providence, came in this morning.

No Use for Third Party.

AN ORIGINAL IOWA PROHIBITIONIST GIVES REASONS FOR SUPPORTING HARRISON AND MORTON WHICH ARE GOOD HERE AS THERE

The Leaf and [illegible] has recently printed [illegible] extracts from the letter of Chaplain Lozier giving his reasons for supporting Harrison and Morton. Mr Lozier is one of the leading ministers of the Methodist Episcopal church in Iowa and was once the third party candidate for Governor of that State. The letter is so applicable to any other State [illegible] [illegible] we herewith give it in full.

MOUNT VERNON, July 7. Editor of [illegible] Register. "Why don't you join the Third party? I thought you were a Prohibitionist!" exclaimed a zealous young brother to me the other day. Let me answer my ardent young friend and others like him. Like yourself I have supposed that I was a Prohibitionist. I suppose I was one before you were born. The saloon keeper was one I have hated for the last thirty years [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the saloon in my [illegible] ever since [illegible]. I have run the gauntlet of [illegible], [illegible], and [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] with the [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible]. For six years I fought with the "[illegible]" of that [illegible] [illegible] where Haddock fell. I was in Northwood a Prohibitionist that the first Third party convention that ever met in Iowa made me a candidate for Governor in my absence and without my knowledge and I didn't back down from the race. Third party kept up its fight until the Republican party agreed to submit a prohibitory amendment to a vote of the people of Iowa. This hand wrote the resolution that went into that platform, and when that resolution carried, I nominated Sherman for Governor in the convention and immediately proclaimed to the Prohibitionists of Iowa that the time had come for every temperance man to rally to the support of the Republican party, both on account of its attitude on the question of temperance, and also because of the fact that the saloonists all over the State were repudiating the party for giving us a chance to vote upon the saloon question. The result was an overwhelming majority for prohibition, followed by the [illegible] of the best, and in the main the best enforced, prohibitory law on this planet and to-day the Republican party is the Prohibition party in Iowa. Instead of Prohibitionists of Iowa now stultifying themselves, by going back upon the party that has done so much for our cause, we are hoping and believing that the sober second thought of our brethren in other States will lead them to do as we have done. We did not fight the Republican party as these Third party champions are doing. We pressed the claims of our homes and our hearts upon the politicians and fought only the saloon. So that when we were able to command the attention of the party it had not been made our enemy by our abuse and vilification. Not so these Third party [illegible]. Their chief "organ," [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] "[illegible]," [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] against the Republican party than it has above [illegible] the saloons and the devil and the Democratic party altogether. [illegible] [illegible] party should and will make [illegible]. [illegible] [illegible] your vote where it will [illegible] strengthen and perpetuate in power the party that is the [illegible] of the [illegible] and the saloon [illegible]. Furthermore, I may as well say right here that when the Third party [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] General Brooks for Vice President, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. I [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. The Democratic party [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] The saloons and whiskey rings will "come down" handsomely to aid the [illegible], because it is only by [illegible] the Democratic party [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] higher. When the day [illegible] [illegible] right bad, I don't want it at all. When [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and private character, and whose unpopularity with the saloon element all conspire to stand as [illegible] over the [illegible] [illegible] of the safety of the cause of temperance in their hands. The "Sociable [illegible]" [illegible] the Republican party to active hostility to the saloon [illegible]. The organs of the whiskey rings so [illegible] it, are [illegible] their [illegible] against that party. This is our day of great opportunity. Let Prohibitionists of other States [illegible] to their generation as the Prohibitionists of Iowa, and the record of that party throughout the nation. But if the Third party shall again defeat the Republican and continue the dominion of democracy, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the laughing stock of those triumphant [illegible] [illegible] think not—so some party [illegible] to [illegible] hope—that the Republican party will then fall to pieces, and that its members will gravitate naturally to those who are now clamoring them like [illegible]. Think not that the Republican party, whose history is the history of the nation's wisest statesmen, truest patriots, noblest martyrs and most illustrious warriors—the party of the Union [illegible] and the ever multiplying generation of men whose glory it is that their veins are [illegible] with the blood of the [illegible] and [illegible]—the party of freedom and of protected American labor. Think not that that party is thus to die. It is vital with the many hallowed memories and sacred traditions to be let thus die who will live when we are all gone to dust. Let us wisely help to make [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] of the slave [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the descendants of the old English colonists. Something for the Workingmen to Remember.

It would be hardly possible to put the free trade case more clearly or more strongly. The arguments which President Cleveland uses are those which Mr Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any English free trader would employ now. They are purely free trade arguments, and as such we are very glad to see Mr Cleveland using them, though sorry for the popular infatuation which makes it dangerous to give them their right name.—London Times

He discusses the principles at issue in the struggle and shows that he is a free trade candidate in everything but name. The reservation is an important one for American party purposes. The President feels compelled to characterize the attempt to brand him a free trader as a deception of his enemies. For all that, the electoral conflict now in progress is a conflict between free trade and protection, and nothing less.—London News

The only time England can use a Celt is when he emigrates to America and votes for free trade.—London Times

Attention Lumbermen!

The lumbermen of the State of Maine are a unit in their OPPOSITION TO FREE MANUFACTURED LUMBER, *as there is a strong opposition from Missouri, Kentucky, West Virginia and all the Pacific States to the placing of lumber in the free list. The high duty now collected by the Dominion of Canada upon nearly all the articles manufactured of wood should prevent such action by Congress * * * Free lumber from Canada without equal advantages in return would be* A WHOLLY GRATUITOUS INJUSTICE TO OUR OWN PEOPLE * * * The Canadian lumberman purchases his supplies and teams at a less cost than do our lumbermen and he PAYS LESS FOR LABOR.—Bangor Commercial, February, 1888

Only Three Weeks More.

Three weeks from to-day the eyes of the people in the other States of the Union will be turned toward Maine awaiting the verdict at the polls. The time for active work is short and every day should be made to count something in the way of furthering the cause of protection. While it is true that this is a State election the result will do much toward arousing the people all over the country for the final contest in November. Every man in Maine who desires the election of Harrison and Morton can best subserve their interests by working for and voting the Republican ticket in September. It is then their services will count in the fact that the masses of the people are not in sympathy with their platform or their candidate will stimulate them to put forth extraordinary exertions in each town to see that every man who usually votes the Democratic ticket gets to the polls. In view of this fact it behooves the Republicans to be alert from this out. A complete organization should be perfected in each town for active work until the polls close on the day of the election.

Maine, after Vermont, is the first State to pass judgment on the free trade policy of the Democratic party and we not only want to condemn it, but do so in a manner that will let the country know what Maine thinks of a party that places lumber and wool on the free list, while affording the highest kind of protection for sugar and rice, the products of the South. Protection on the sea and on the land, no quarter for the candidate who is running on a free trade, fishery surrender platform, should be the battle cry of the Maine voters.

Contradicting Candidate Putnam.

On the occasion of his recent visit to Bangor Candidate Putnam undertook the defence of the free wool and free lumber clauses of the Mills bill. Mr Putnam being a good Democrat we invite the attention of our readers to what the New York Sun, the ablest Democratic paper in the country to-day, says on the subject. We quote from the Sun because our Democratic friends are fond of discrediting statements in Republican papers as "partisan misrepresentations." This objection, of course, cannot be raised against the Sun which says:

Thus the reduction of $5,000,000 at the expense of American wool growers would be for the direct benefit of the English colony of Australia, with the enormous sheep product of which Americans would be brought into direct competition. So, too, while England does not export lumber to America to any appreciable amount, her colony of Canada, quite adjacent to us, possesses an almost limitless supply, and the general use, at a cheaper figure, of Canadian lumber instead of our own would divert to our neighbor across the water a good share of the profit now made by our own people.

Candidate Putnam declares that the removal of the lumber duty would not hurt us because Canada, our only competitor, has so little standing timber, but now comes the Democratic Sun with the statement that Canada "possesses an almost limitless supply" ready to flood us the moment the duty is removed. Will the workingmen vote for Candidate Putnam, Canadian lumber and low wages?

Coast Defences.

The Whig tries to crawl out of the free whiskey dilemma by claiming that the Republican party, if in power, would scatter the public money with so lavish a hand that there would be no occasion for taking off the internal revenue, or any other taxes.—Commercial

The Whig said that with the revision of the tariff recommended by the Republican party and with proper provision for the construction of coast defences there would be no troublesome surplus in the treasury. If there has been a man in this country who has been held up as embodying the pure essence of Democracy that man was the late Samuel J. Tilden, and as his last will and testament to the Democratic party for which he had labored so zealously, he left an earnest appeal for the adequate defence of our coast. Now the Commercial labels the recommendation in the Republican platform to do this very thing as the lavish use of the public money. Our unhappy neighbor is welcome to all the material it can make out of this matter.

It Stands Convicted

The ridiculous attitude in which we placed the Commercial by the presentation of the contradictory statements that have appeared in its columns within a few months was more than it could face and it abandons the field. It attempts no explanation because none was possible under the circumstances. The parallel column was a complete give away of the double dealing in which it has indulged in its treatment of the lumber question. It is now engaged in an effort to break the force of the disastrous effects sure to follow the removal of the lumber duty, but the extract from its own columns in February last proves the utter falsity of its more recent comments on the subject. It stands convicted out of its own mouth. The exposure of the absolute dishonesty of the Commercial's discussion of the lumber tariff is important only as it shows the unreliability of that paper. Its chief reliance is the hope that its readers will not remember one day what it said the day before, and it is only necessary to watch carefully to convict it out of its own columns just as we have done on the lumber question.

In a Small Minority

The Boston Herald seems to think that Bowdoin College has declared for Cleveland. Hardly. President Hyde would not claim that he is Bowdoin College or even that he monopolizes the political wisdom of the whole faculty.—Portland Express

Hardly. In fact President Hyde, who voted for Cleveland in 1884 and is therefore in no sense a new acquisition to the Democratic party, is in a very small minority. Of the faculty eight are for protection and only four for the Democratic free trade policy, while of the students three-fourths of them are staunch Republicans.

Mr Blaine in the Canvass.

The hard blows Mr Blaine is striking for the triumphant election of Harrison and Morton cause our Democratic friends no end of unhappiness. One day they assert that Chairman Quay is much disturbed at the prominence of Mr Blaine in the canvass, and the next that Gen Harrison is so jealous of the man from Maine that he contemplates withdrawing from the ticket. One story is as true as the other and both are so ridiculously false that they only serve to show the desperate straits of the Democracy. The Maine correspondent of the Boston Herald writes:

Mr. Blaine's next public appearance in a political way will be at Bangor on Thursday next. There is no truth whatever in the report that Quay and his committee are apprehensive lest Blaine dominate the canvass. Much less is there danger of Harrison becoming jealous of the attention shown Mr. Blaine. The Democrats play into the hands of the Republicans when they emphasize the suggestion that Blaine and not Harrison is the real candidate of the Republican party, and that, if Harrison is elected, Blaine will be the Secretary of State. The first great point that Quay has in view is the transfer of the Irish labor contingent of the Republican party from Blaine to Harrison. The thorough identification of Blaine with the Harrison candidacy is a long step in this direction, and, in Quay's opinion, the Irish vote will be held if it comes to be believed, whether true or not, that if we have a Republican administration, Blaine will shove its foreign policy confidence in Harrison's election is greater than any confidence he ever had in his own. I compare what he said to me a day or two ago with what he said to me about this time in the summer of 1884. As a matter of fact, he never believed in his own success in 1884 until after the Maine and Ohio elections, and to this day he believes, as a good many other shrewd politicians do, that he would have been President of the United States if he had gone straight home from Ohio to Maine. That would have made the Burchard business and a good many other things impossible.

A Black Eye for the Argus.

The Portland Argus having made the statement that the manager of the Sanford mills was trying to bulldoze his employes the following letter was sent to the Argus office last week:

SANFORD, Aug. 17, 1888.

To the Editor of the Argus.

In your issue of the 16th appears an article entitled, "How Monopolists Work," asking if it was true that the manager of the Sanford mills had a paper circulated amongst his help, requiring every voter to sign it, pledging himself to vote for Reed and the Republican ticket, or else be discharged.

In answer to the above the undersigned, a Democrat, who was a delegate to the Democratic State Convention at Augusta, wishes to state most positively that it was not true. The paper referred to in the Argus was circulated among the Republicans to form a Republican club, and was passed around by one of a committee appointed for that purpose at a meeting held in Clark's Hall a few nights before, and was not to my knowledge presented to a Democrat. The writer has worked for the Messrs Goodalls since he was a boy, and since coming of age has always voted the Democratic ticket. Never before or since becoming a voter has any one of the Goodalls, or any person acting for them, asked him to change his vote or insinuated in any manner that it would be for his interest to vote the Republican ticket. If you want the facts in relation to the alleged bulldozing by the Goodalls in the mills here, send out a reporter and let him interview some of the Democrats who are working here to-day.

CHARLES A. BODWELL

I hereby certify that the above is correct as far as I have any knowledge.

GEORGE E. ALLEN,
Member Democratic Town Committee

The Argus should remember this lesson and be more careful in the future how it indulges in baseless assertions.

JOHN S. KIMBALL & SON,

AUCTIONEERS,

General Ins. and Real Estate Agency

[illegible]

[illegible]

By George Manville Fenn.

I looked up at Sir John, and he gave me a satisfied nod as he tried one of the locks, and then we both stood as if turned to stone, for from just at my feet there came a dull, knocking sound, and as I looked down, I could see the black sawdust shake.

What I wanted to do was to run, for I felt that the place was haunted, but I couldn't move, and when I looked at Sir John, he was holding up his right hand, as if to order me to be silent. Then he held his candle down, for there was another sound, but this time more of a grinding crunching in a dull sort of way, just as if some one was forcing an iron chisel in between the joints of the stones. Then there was a long pause, and I half thought it had been fancy, but soon after, as I stood there hardly able to breathe, the sawdust just in one place was heaved up about an inch.

I was terribly alarmed, not knowing what to think, but Sir John was brave as brave, and he signed to me not to speak, and stood watching till there was a dull cracking sound, the sawdust was heaved up again, and all at once I seemed to get a hot puff of that burnt oily smell right in my nose. Then I began to understand, and felt afraid in a different fashion, as I knew that we had only got there just in time.

The next minute Sir John made a movement toward me, took my candle and turned it upside down, so that it went out, and then pointed back toward the outer cellar, as he put his lips to my ear.

"Iron bar!"

I stepped back softly and got the iron bar from where it lay on the edge of a bin, and I was about to pick up the screw driver, when I remembered where the wooden mallet lay, and I picked up that before stepping softly back to where Sir John was watching the floor, and now I could see that the sawdust was higher in one place, as if a flagstone had been heaved up a little at one end.

There was no doubt about it, for, as I handed the crowbar, the end of the stone was wrenched up a little higher and then stuck, for it was tightly held by those on either side, but it was up far enough to let a thin ray of dull light come up through the floor and shine on the side of one of the old chests.

It was a curious scene there, in that gloomy cellar, Sir John standing on one side, candle in his left, the iron bar in his right hand, and me on the other bending down ready with the mallet to hit over the head the first that should come up through the floor. For, though horribly alarmed, I could understand now what it all meant—an attempt to steal the gold in the chests, though how those who were working below had managed to get there was more than I could have said.

As we watched, the smell of the burnt oil came through, and I knew that it must have been going on for a long time.

All at once we could hear a low whispering, and then there was a grinding noise of iron against stone, the flag gritted and gave a little, but it held fast all along, and I could understand that the man who was trying to wrench it up had no room to work, and therefore no power to wrench up the stone. Then came the faint whispering again, and it seemed to sound hollow. Then another grinding noise and the end of the flag was moved a trifle higher, so that the line of light on the old chest looked two or three inches broad.

I stepped softly to Sir John and put my lips to his ear as the whispering could be heard again, and I said softly,

"Shall I fetch the police?"

Sir John for answer set his candle down upon the top of one of the chests and put it out with the bar as he whispered to me in turn, "Wait a few moments." And then—"Look." He pointed with the iron bar, and as I stared hard at the faint light shining up from below the edge of the stone, I could see just the tips of some one's fingers come [illegible] to sweep the sawdust away to [illegible]. Then they came through a [illegible] and were drawn back while [illegible] the low whispering again [illegible] was thrust right through [illegible]

[illegible] the [illegible] grasped [illegible]. Just then he uttered [illegible] to look at him, but we [illegible] his face [illegible] tightly, and I [illegible] full of the light and [illegible] for there was [illegible] what was [illegible] Mr. Barclay [illegible] that he could never [illegible]

[illegible] bent down there, staring at [illegible] and at once I felt my arm [illegible] I was pushed softly into the outer cellar, and from there into the passage [illegible] Sir John closing and locking the door softly before tottering into the pantry and sinking into a chair uttering a low moan.

"Oh, don't take on, sir," I whispered, but he turned upon me roughly.

"Silence, man," he panted, "and give me time to think," and then I heard him breathe softly in a voice so full of agony that it was dreadful to hear, "Oh, my son!—my son!"

"No, no, sir," I said—for I couldn't bear it. "It wouldn't; there's some mistake."

"Mistake! Then you saw it too, Burdon! No; there is no mistake."

I couldn't speak, for I remembered about the keys, and something seemed to come up in my throat and choke me, for it seemed so terrible for my young master to have done this thing.

"What are you going to do, sir?" I said at last, and it was me now who gripped his a[illegible]

"Do?" he said bitterly. "All that is a heritage mine to hold in trust for my son—his after my death to hold in trust for the generations to come. Burdon, it is an incubus—a curse, but I have my duty to do; that old gold shall not be wasted on a wanton"——

"What," I panted. "You think that too?"

"Yes," he cried fiercely. "It is that wretched Jezebel who has turned my poor boy's brain."

CHAPTER IX.

MR. BARCLAY GOES TOO FAR.

When young Mr. Barclay——

Stop. How do I know all this?

Why, it was burned into my memory, and I heard every word from him.

When young Mr. Barclay left the dining room on the night he disappeared, he went up to his own room, miserable at his position with his father and taking to himself the blame for the unhappiness that he had brought upon the girl who loved him with all her sweet, true heart. "But it's fate—it's fate," he said, as he went up to his room, and then, unable to settle himself there, he lit a cigar, came down and went out just as he was dressed in his evening clothes, only that he had put on a light overcoat, and began to walk up and down in front of our house and watch the windows opposite, to try and catch a glimpse of Miss Adela.

Ten o'clock [illegible] struck, but she did not show herself at the window, and feeling quite sick at heart he was thinking of going in again, when he suddenly heard a faint cough about twenty yards away, and, turning sharply, he saw the lady he was looking for crossing the road, having evidently just come back from some visit.

"Adela—at last," he whispered, as he caught her hand.

"Mr. Drinkwater!" she cried in a startled way. "How you frightened me."

"Frightened?" he said reproachfully. "Is that all you have to say to one who has patiently watched for weeks trying in vain to get a few words with you?"

"How absurd," she said, as he held her hand and detained her. "What can you want?"

"You!" he said excitedly. "Don't struggle to get away. Listen to me!"

"No, no, no!" she cried in a half frightened way. "Let me go. My sisters are waiting."

"Let you go? How can you be so cruel to me? Adela, dearest, you know I love you."

"What madness—what nonsense! Mr. Drinkwater, loose my hand!"

"Never! till you give me some hope. Adela, your looks have told me so a hundred times—have led me on to speak so plainly—you do love me—you will be my wife!"

"Impossible!" she panted, as she tried to get away. "You cannot marry me."

"I can—I will!" he cried passionately. "I have given her up for your sake. I will not be driven into a marriage that would end in misery. Adela, dearest, listen to me."

"Now, Mr. Drinkwater, pray be sensible. This is absurd, out in the open street."

"There is no one to hear us, and you refuse to grant me an interview."

"Of course," she cried. "I have told you again and again that it is impossible, and that I cannot listen to you."

"Yes," he said, "but with your beautiful mocking eyes laughing the while and bidding me come on."

"It is not true," she said, laughing. "Mr. Drinkwater, will you let me pass?"

"I will, and walk with you."

"If you please, no."

"Indeed, but I will," he cried, and he kept by her till she reached the steps. "It is not proper for a beautiful young girl to be out at 11 o'clock alone."

"Well, there, now I am at our door, so good night, Mr. Ungallant," she said mockingly.

"No, not yet."

"What do you mean?"

"I mean that I've begged for an interview until I can beg no more, and now I am going to enforce it."

"Are you mad?"

"Very nearly," he said, and as she hurriedly thrust in the latchkey, he held her other hand.

"Now, will you loose my hand?" she panted excitedly. "My sisters ——"

"I'm coming in to see them in a straightforward English manner," he said, for he was as obstinate now to persist as she evidently was to shake him off.

"Indeed you are not," she cried, slipping from him and through the door, but before she could close it, he had thrust it back, and stood beside her in the passage, which was feebly lit by a half turned down oil lamp.

"Oh, this is madness. How can you be such a fool?"

"Love makes men fools," he retorted, closing the door; "now take me up and introduce me to your sisters."

"What—what shall I do?" she muttered. "Pray, pray go."

"No, I have stormed the castle now," he cried laughingly, though he half wondered at her calling him a fool, "and mean to stay till the lovely little garrison yields at discretion."

"No, no; for your life, you must go," she cried, trying to push him toward the door. "Pray, pray, go."

"Never! You have driven me to this by your mocking looks; so now give way and [illegible] any more."

She backed from him trembling now, till she reached the dining room into which she darted and tried to shut the door, but he was too quick and followed her in, when she ran from him and sank sobbing into an easy chair, and in an instant he was on his knees before her.

"Adela, dearest Adela," he whispered tenderly, "forgive me all this, but ——"

"Adela, is that you?—Here, for goodness sake! Why don't you answer?"

"Is she there?"

The first was a rough man's voice, the next that of a woman, and as they were heard in the passage another voice cried hoarsely,

"It's [illegible] the game's up."

"Hush! Hush! Behind that curtain! Anywhere," panted Adela, starting up in alarm. "—Too late."

Barclay had sprung to his feet and stood staring in amazement and perfectly heedless of the girl's appeal to him to hide, as two rough [illegible]-like men came in, followed by a woman.

"It's caved in, and Ned is hurt," cried the first man, and then, "Who's this?"

"What! No, no, no!" cried Adela wildly, "don't, don't say he's hurt."

"Here, who's this?" said the first man again. "Oh, it's you, is it?"

"Trapped!" muttered Barclay Drinkwater, as without fully understanding his position, he realized the fact that there was something peculiarly wrong in the place into which he had forced himself, and his first act now was to make for the door, but it was blocked by the two men, while the oldish woman who had entered with them gazed at him viciously.

"Stand where you are!" said the first of the men. "How comes he here, Adela?"

"I couldn't help it, Tom. He forced his way in. It's all a mistake. It's Mr. ——"

"Oh, I know who it is well enough," said the man savagely. "Forced his way in! Very well. He wouldn't come here unless he wanted to stop, and stop he shall."

"Let me pass," said Mr. Barclay sternly.

"Not much," said the man, with an ominous look.

"Yes, yes, let him go," cried the girl. "I'll explain all to Ned. And you all stand there and don't come to his help."

"Ten minutes, more or less, won't hurt, my girl," cried the man.

"Will you let me pass?" cried Mr. Barclay. "Miss Mangnall, I beg your pardon for this intrusion. Forgive me and good night."

JOY, HEALTH AND COMFORT TO THE HOUSEHOLD

Victor Steam Heater.

(Portable or Brick Set.)

All the valuable features of the old construction retained, and in the reconstruction and improvements the Victor has the five essential requisites to a perfect Heater, viz: Safety, Durability, Economy, Simplicity and Ease of Management, which are the demands of the public, whose confidence we seek. It will do more work with less fuel than any other Heater now in the market. We have a portable Heater set up for exhibition in our shop, and parties contemplating heating by steam are cordially invited to call and inspect the Victor before deciding.

Testimonials from all parts of the United States and especially from our own citizens favor the Victor above all other Heaters.

THE NAKED TRUTH.

Whilst Truth was one day bathing in a limpid river, Falsehood happened to pass, and noticing the garments of Truth on the bank of the stream, conceived the idea of exchanging his clothing for that of the bather, who came from the bath and mourned the loss sustained, but disdaining Falsehood's garb has since gone naked through the world. Whether the origin of the expression—"the naked truth"—is mythical or otherwise, it is universally known to be the naked truth that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has no equal as a curative agent for consumption (lung scrofula), and chronic nasal catarrh, asthma, and kindred diseases of the throat and lungs. d&wlw aul4

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good. d&wlw aug16

You hardly realize that it is medicine when taking Carter's Little Liver Pills; they are very small; no bad effects; all troubles from torpid liver are relieved by their use. d&wlw aug16

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia and digestion, give tone and vigor to the system. d&wlw

SUPERIOR FLOUR.

There is no article of food more generally consumed than wheat flour in its various forms of bread and pastry, but chemists, by examination, find that by its use mankind loses two-thirds of the elements that go to make up bone and muscles. These vital elements are the phosphates, which are absolutely necessary for the maintenance of health, and which nature has provided in the wheat grain, but man has removed from the flour in the process of bolting. It was this fact that suggested the invention of Prof. Horsford of his preparation for a baking powder that would add these nutritious phosphates, and thereby supply the deficiency in the flour. In place of the alumn, cream tartar, etc., used in common baking powders, he produced an acid phosphate, and thus makes a baking powder which not only raises the dough, but leaves in the bread the vital phosphates of which the flour has been deprived. d&wlm

The awe struck audience gazed
On the figure, gaunt and gray,
'Twas the murdered king, or the ghost of him,
And Hamlet was the play.
His hour was brief, he said,
He must go ere light of day,
To the place of torment prepared for him,
Till his sins were purged away.
Yes, purged was the word he used,
And I thought what a remedy rare
Would Pierce's Purgative Pellets prove,
In his case, thus and there.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets have no equal as a cathartic in derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. Small, pleasant in action, and purely vegetable. d&wlw aug14

Get rid of that tired feeling as quick as possible. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives strength, a good appetite, and health. 5

PECULIAR

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

Ayer's Hair Vigor restores color and vitality to weak and gray hair. Through its healing and cleansing qualities, it prevents the accumulation of dandruff and cures all scalp diseases. The best hair dressing ever made, and by far the most economical. aug20 d&wlw

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by purifying and enriching the blood, improves the appetite, aids the assimilative process, strengthens the nerves, and invigorates the system. It is, therefore, the best and most thoroughly reliable alterative that can be found for old and young.
